Russell Asks Board To

BY R. E. POWELL.

Less than six hours after it had heard Governor-elect Richard B. Russell, Jr., urge a more simplified government in Georgia, the legislative reorganization commission Tuesday had voted to strip the secretary of state of all but his limited constitutional powers and for the consolidation of all tax-collecting agencies of the state.

Quick action of the committee with respect to the office of secretary of state was attributed to a ringing speech made by the incumbent, George H. Carswell, in which he urged that the legislature confer on the governor-elect broader powers and in which, also, he pledged to his successful rival in the last campaign his wholehearted co-operation.

If the legislature follows the first two recommendations on which the committee has reached an agreement, the duties of motor vehicle commissioner, corporation commissioner, superintendent of state printing and member of the board of tax appeals and securities commission will be transferred from the office of secretary of state.

Motor Vehicle Work.
That of motor vehicle commissioner, whose chief duties are the collection of approximately $5,000,000 annually in automobile license tags, will be consolidated, under the second resolution approved, with the tax collecting duties of the tax commissioner, the revenue commissioner and the comptroller general.

Hearings of the committee, expected to last the better part of two months, will be resumed at 9 o'clock this morning in the office of the clerk of the house of representatives at the capitol. All tax-collecting officials will be examined by the committee today.

Invited by the committee to outline his views, Governor-elect Russell was heard shortly after Chairman Peterson called the meeting to order at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Almost all state officials, other than those representing the institutions of higher learning and the charitable institutions, were present.

"I am confident," the governor-elect said, "that practically every citizen of Georgia who has no personal interest in the matter favors a reorganization of our government. When we face the fact that the state of Georgia has a large casual deficiency which is increasing year by year as governmental expenditures continue to exceed the amount of income derived from taxes—despite the fact that the burden of taxation on our people has increased from time to time—and when we further know that there is urgent necessity for a decrease in expenditures, it would seem that it should be a relatively easy matter to secure this much desired reform."

"Any movement of this nature," he explained, "is certain to collapse at its very inception if those who have the work in hand are guided by personal considerations or prejudices. No feeling for or against any department nor any political motives should dic-

Highlights of Russell's Address On State Reorganization Needs

The administrative machinery of our state government has become too heavy, cumbersome and expensive. Its (the committee's) duty . . . is to recommend to the next general assembly legislation which will give the people of Georgia a government in keeping with modern times and conditions. The machinery of government should be so simple that the humblest citizen can understand it.

Here in Georgia we have more than one hundred different agencies to carry on the state's business and I venture to say there are very few who can sit down with pen and paper and name them all and outline the duties that each is supposed to perform.

I am confident that practically every citizen of Georgia who has no personal interest in the matter favors a reorganization of our government.

If your (the committee's) recommendations are born of hasty conclusions and preconceived ideas it will defeat its purpose and result in confusion worse confounded.

No feeling for or against any department nor any political motives should dictate the writing of a single line of such a reorganization bill.

Co-ordinate and combine the departments of state to a minimum and thus give the people of Georgia the economical government which the state today so sadly needs.

The people of Georgia will have such a government when they really demand it. The final authority and power rests with them.

CHARGES AGAINST MAYOR WALKER ARE DISMISSED

Roosevelt Holds Complaints Made by Committee Are Insufficient for Further Action.

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt today dismissed the charges on which the city affairs committee asked him to oust Mayor James J. Walker from office.

The governor declared he did not find "sufficient justification" in the complaint for further action against the mayor.

He said it was a fundamental principle of the state government that the people of the various communities elect their own officials. The greatest caution should be exercised, he declared, before the governor interfered to annul the deliberate decision of the voters.

The mayor was accused of condoning incompetence and of encouraging corruption. The formal charges were filed March 18 by the Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, chairman and vice chairman of the city affairs committee.

"Legally as well as morally," he said, "the mayor is entitled for the corruption of his subordinates, the breakdown of his departments of government, the collapse of law and order and the prevalence of low standards of public life under his administration."

The governor held that when charges are based on the actions of subordinates, it must "clearly appear" that the acts complained of were known to the mayor and that he failed to stop them.

The governor's decision was made public in Albany. News of it reached Mayor Walker as he was presiding at a meeting of the board of estimate.

Then he called for the next item on the order of business.

His political colleague, John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall, made this comment:

"The decision was inevitable. It is only another vindication of Mayor Walker's splendid and unparalleled record."

The Rev. Dr. Holmes announced he and his colleagues would not give up their fight.

The action of the governor, taken without giving fair opportunity to the city affairs committee to reply to the slanderous personal charges of the mayor and his chairman and vice chairman, or to refute the inaccuracies, distortions and suppressions of data contained in the mayor's defense, is an insult to the first chapter in the committee's attempt to remove Mayor Walker from office," he said.

"We open at once the second chapter in our special meeting called this afternoon."

"What Governor Roosevelt has not found in our charges, Judge Seabury (Selling Seabury) counsel for a legislative commission, is conducting a citywide investigation into (administration)."

The indictment against Mayor Walker, which charged Kassay violated the judicial law by "verbally justifying" allegedly planned attempts to wreck the navy dirigible, Akron, under construction here.

Siamese Monarch, Queen Welcomed in Washington

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(UP)—American democracy gave a hearty welcome tonight to one of the world's few absolute monarchs—King Prajadhipok of Siam, and his queen, Rambhadrani, who came here to pay an official call on the President and Mrs. Hoover.

The royal pair arrived at 6 p. m. on a special train from New York city. They were greeted by Vice President Curtis, Secretary Stimson, and other high officials. Bands played and fully uniformed soldiers saluted them. The official welcome was given by the United States marshal, who was presented to Stimson and the others in turn. The queen, with Secretary Stimson, followed him down the reception line.

The queen's attire was a symphony of brown, fashioned in the European or American mode. She wore a hat.

Tonight the king and queen dined privately in the palatial home on Massachusetts avenue which will be their residence here and rested from their week of traveling. Above them floated the Siamese flag.

The king—a 98-pound monarch—seemed particularly small in the high silk hat—descended from the car followed by the queen, Curtis, smiling, stepped forward to greet the monarch, who was presented to Stimson and the others in turn. The queen, with Secretary Stimson, followed him down the reception line.

WIDOW OF GORDON, FORMER GOVERNOR AND GENERAL, DIES

Funeral Rites for Mrs.
John B. Gordon To Be Held in Atlanta Thursday Morning.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 28.—(AP)—Mrs. John B. Gordon, widow of the Confederate general, former United States senator and former governor of Georgia, died here today.

Funeral services will be held in Atlanta, at the North Avenue Presbyterian church on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. Richard Orme Flinn will officiate and interment will be in Oakland cemetery in a double grave beside her distinguished husband.

Death came to the 93-year-old woman at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frances Gordon Smith, with whom she spent her winters.

She had been in declining health for some time.

During the War Between the States she accompanied the general on many of his expeditions and was within sound of gunshot during all important engagements in which he participated.

In addition to Mrs. Smith, another daughter, Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown, of Berlin, N. D., and a son, Major Hugh Gordon, of Athens, Ga., survive.

Mrs. Fannie Haralson Gordon was born at LaGrange, Ga., September 13, 1837, the daughter of Hugh A. Haralson, attorney and congressman.

She was one of four daughters, all of whom were married.

She was married to General Gordon on her seventeenth birthday, September 18, 1854. Two of her sisters married General Gordon's law partners in Atlanta, B. H. Overby and Logan E. Bleckley. The other sister became the wife of James M. Pace, Covington attorney.

After the war Mrs. Gordon and her husband resided at Brunswick for a short time, moving then to Atlanta where they lived until the general's death at Miami, Fla., January 9, 1904.

Since the general's death she has lived with her son, Major Hugh Gordon, at Athens, Ga., and with her daughters, spending the summers in the north and the winters in her native Georgia. Mrs. Gordon was a member of the Colonial Dames and the Presbyterian church.

General Gordon was appointed to the Confederate army from Alabama at the outbreak of the war as lieutenant colonel of the Sixth Alabama Infantry, December 28, 1861. He became colonel of the regiment April 23, the following year.

He was appointed brigadier general of the provisional army of the Confederate States May 7, 1863, and major general May 14, 1864.

He led the last charge of one division at Appomattox. When he surrendered with General Robert E. Lee, General Gordon was in command of the 13th, 21st, 58th, 60th and 61st regiments of Georgia infantry, originally Lawton's brigade of Early's division of the Army of Northern Virginia.

He was a native of Upson county and graduated in law from the University of Georgia and was admitted to the bar in 1858.

After his discharge he resumed the practice of law and in his first race for political office was defeated for governor in 1868.

He was elected to the United States senate in 1875 and was re-elected in 1879, resigning in 1880 to promote the building of the Georgia Pacific railroad.

General Gordon was elected governor and served from 1886 to 1890 and returned to the national senate in 1891, where he remained until 1897, declining re-election.

The remainder of his days were devoted to literary efforts. He is buried in Oakland cemetery at Atlanta and a plot has been reserved there for his widow.

MRS. GORDON'S FUNERAL
IS SET FOR THURSDAY
Funeral services for Mrs. Gordon will be conducted at 11 o'clock Thursday morning from the North Avenue Presbyterian church, with the Rev. Richard Orme Flinn officiating. Interment will be in Oakland cemetery. Until the funeral the body will lie in state at Spring Hill.

NEW TEXAS FIELD SCENE OF HORROR AS OIL CATCHES

Ten Additional Workmen Are Injured and
Five Are Burned So Badly They Very Probably Will Not Survive.

FLAMES PREVENT WORK OF RESCUE

Geyser of Fire Rises Two Hundred Feet Into Air
and Is Visible for Many Miles.

GLADEWATER, Texas, April 28.—(AP)—Forty-four men were killed today when the wild Sinclair No. 1 Cole oil well, two miles from here, exploded from a spark caused by friction.

Ten others were injured, five probably fatally. Most of the injured were removed to a hospital at Longview.

Tom Cole, part owner of the well, said he saw a spark caused by the friction of lowering tools into the well. He ran, but got only a few feet before the explosion dashed him to the ground, searing his back and head.

Tonight the bodies still lay about the flaming pyre, with all available ambulances employed in removing the injured men to Gladewater and Longview.

The well was brought in unexpectedly early yesterday, a gusher of an estimated capacity of 30,000 barrels a day. It was out of control from the time the petroleum spouted over the derrick.

A disaster was narrowly averted then, but roustabouts quenched fires in the vicinity.

For a time gas spread over such a wide expanse that tank-builders waiting to erect containers could approach no nearer than a quarter of a mile. With the oil spreading wildly over the ground, an effort was made late today to curb the gusher.

The drilling crew was trying to regulate tools left in the hole when the oil began to flow, when a spark was caused by friction.

Although the well tonight shot a column of flame 250 feet into the air and was out of control, Gladewater was not endangered, nor was there another well nearer than a mile.

Tonight's casualties ran the death list in the new east Texas field to 23 within the past ten days. The other eleven resulted from a series of fires and explosions.

Bodies of five of the victims snatched from the edge of the flaming oil pool about the well were brought to Gladewater.

Nine bodies could be seen in the inferno which spread over an area of more than 300 square yards.

Claude Sizemore, a workman, said the fire came so quickly that there was no way of telling how it started.

"The flames shot hundreds of feet into the air and reached out after everything," he explained. "I had stepped from my car and had approached within fifty feet of the well."

Three men who were up on the derrick.

ED ELLIS OPENS FREEDOM FIGHT

Habeas Corpus Writ
Sought in City Court.
U. S. Watching Outcome

Ed O. Ellis, alleged former member of the Floyd Woodward gang who is serving a year at River camp following revocation of a suspended sentence, Tuesday began a fight for liberty with what is said to be the first habeas corpus petition ever filed in the city court of Atlanta.

Judge Hugh Dorsey, of the city court, signed a writ returnable at 9 o'clock Friday morning.

William B. McRae, attorney for Ellis, filed the petition, which is based on the charge that the order issued by Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, on April 8 to revoke Ellis' suspended sentence was illegal and void in that sentence had never been pronounced on Ellis as provided by law.

Assistant District Attorney Hal Lindsey Tuesday afternoon said that should Ellis gain his liberty from the chain gang on the habeas corpus petition, the federal government will welcome Ellis with open arms and will hold him for trial on mail fraud charges involving the alleged swindling of Roy Martin of Columbus, in a fake race horse betting scheme.

Ellis' petition for the writ of habeas corpus alleges that he pleaded guilty before Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, in 1924, but that neither Judge Dorsey nor any other judge pronounced sentence on him. He claims that he was sentenced to the chain gang on the habeas corpus petition, but that no sentence was pronounced on him.

Hearings of the committee, expected to last the better part of two months, will be resumed at 9 o'clock this morning in the office of the clerk of the house of representatives at the capitol. All tax-collecting officials will be examined by the committee today.

Invited by the committee to outline his views, Governor-elect Russell was heard shortly after Chairman Peterson called the meeting to order at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. BIG STEEL MERGER IS BELIEVED NEAR

Eaton Is Re-elected to Directorate of Youngstown Company.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, April 28.—(AP)—Cyrus S. Eaton and his associates who opposed the billion-dollar Bethlehem Steel-Youngstown Sheet and Tube merger retained their positions in the Sheet and Tube organization tonight, while reports of an early merger settlement were circulated.

At a stockholders' meeting that lasted barely 20 minutes, Eaton and his associates, G. C. Brainard, of Youngstown, and Hugh B. Wick and S. Livingston Mather, of Cleveland, were re-elected members of the Sheet and Tube board. Fred Tod, of Youngstown, replaced his brother John, who is in Europe.

After a meeting of the directors, which lasted two and a half hours, it was announced that all officers were re-elected, including Eaton and Mather on the executive committee. No comment was made on the reports of a merger settlement were made.

Explanation for the length of the meeting was that the directors had not been in session for a long time, and that there was much business to be cleared away.

At the stockholders' meeting 700,624 "regular" shares of stock were present, by proxy, of 1,150,505 shares, "black stamped" and 3,453 "red stamped" dissenting stock. A year ago when Eaton was first elected, 917,730 shares of the 1,200,000 outstanding common stock were represented.

The re-election of Eaton and his associates was interpreted here as an indication of some form of a settlement in the merger battle. Disputes from New York said it was stated in usually well-informed quarters in Wall Street that early settlement is expected.

It is pointed out here that if the present merger agreement should be adhered to, Bethlehem and Sheet and Tube would have to pay dissenting stockholders at least $110 a share for their stock—the "fair cash value" fixed by Sheet and Tube directors a year ago. The stockholders who voted for the merger, however, would get the equivalent of only $80. For this reason, it is assumed here that continuation of the merger plans would be under a new agreement.

BISHOP AND ASSOCIATES
BEING WATCHED CLOSELY.
CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 28.—(AP)—George Bishop, Cleveland and New York financier, and the new organization of Continental Steel, headed Saturday are being watched closely by financial circles for their future action toward their large steel, rubber and utility holdings.

In this group, the interests of Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier who resigned as member of the Continental board, and the interests of Otis & Co., center authority to institute far-reaching changes in both the steel and rubber industries.

Continental and Otis units hold approximately 90,000 shares of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company stock. The same group controls the $350,000,000 Republic Steel Corporation.

Their holdings in rubber stocks at the end of 1930 were in excess of $12,000,000. They were sufficiently large to control the election of three directors.

Will Rogers, Globe-Trotter, 'Likes' Democrats for 1932

BY B. R. CRISLER.
It was Will Rogers himself; cow-puncher, movie star, "columnist," and United States ambassador to the world at large, who greeted a representative of The Constitution in his room at the Piedmont hotel Tuesday night. But Will Rogers in a serious mood. For you understand that this business of being in Central America five days ago, in Washington Monday night, and here Tuesday afternoon, is a serious thing, and somewhat of an even for the world's most famous sense of humor.

Hatted and dressed (just as he always dresses) for a providential informal dinner at the Piedmont Driving Club, where he was to be guest of Major John S. Cohen and John Brice, the rope-twirler of the Folies and despair of presidents stood at a table, fumbling with a lot of telegrams. One of them was for Mr. Rogers, out in Santa Monica, Cal. he had just finished composing it and anybody could see that what he wanted to do was to rush out, then and there, to send it off. But he was much too polite to say so and the reporter, of course, much too Machiavellian to let on that he had noticed his agitation.

After an exchange of pleasantries the reporter ventured on a direct question: Had Mr. Rogers attended the Gridiron Club dinner in Washington the night before? Yes. Being a newspaperman, had he joined in the festivities by lampooning any of the distinguished guests? No, he lampooned no one. He was a good sport, he said. It was a good start.

Getting Rid of the Solons.
"Have you folks got rid of your legislature yet?" he queried suddenly, taking the interview into his own hands (and welcome). "After as long a time," was the answer. "You're lucky, then; North Carolina's still messing along with hers. But the best plan I know of to get a legislature off your hands is the one they used in Nicaragua. Have an earthquake."

POLICE RADIO SET BIDS TO BE ASKED THURSDAY

Construction of Antennae for New Station WPDY Starts Today or Tomorrow.

Bids on short-wave radio receiving police automobiles will be opened Thursday night by the police committee which will be installed in Atlanta Tuesday.

Police radio station, WPDY, will begin today or Thursday. The antenna will be between 100 and 120 feet high, and will run from a short pole on the police station tower to another pole about 100 feet away.

Alterations were begun Tuesday on the third floor bandroom of the police station to convert a portion of the space into a room for the broadcasting station. Partitions are being torn out, a linoleum floor laid, and a metal ceiling installed. The work of installing the radio station will begin in about three days. Two weeks for installation, testing and tuning will see the station ready for operation, it was said.

"OPEN" VERDICT IN GIRL'S DEATH
SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 28.—(AP)—A coroner's jury investigating the murder of Louise Teuber, 17, whose body was found hanging from a tree, has decided the young store clerk can't be held responsible for her death "at the hands of a person or persons unknown."

The inquest was conducted by Coroner Chester Gunn at La Mesa yesterday. Seventeen witnesses were questioned.

William Teuber, the girl's father, testified the last time he saw Louise alive was the Thursday before her death Saturday, April 11.

"She wanted to go out," he said, "after being out late the night before. I told her to entertain her company at home."

The menu will include fruit cocktail, broiled chicken, parsley, potatoes, new peas, scalloped squash, rolls, stuffed tomato salad, ice cream, cake and coffee. One group of the home economics department will prepare the tables, another will do the cooking. Between 250 and 300 girls will take part in preparation and carrying out of the dinner and program.

CHURCH TO ORDAIN W. M. ALSTON TODAY

Wallace McPherson Alston, of Decatur, a senior at the Columbia Theological Seminary, will be ordained as a minister in the Presbyterian church tonight by a commission of Atlanta presbytery in the Decatur church, it was announced Tuesday. The charge to the young minister will be delivered by Dr. D. P.

POWER GUY WIRES CUT IN TWO PARTS OF CITY

Seven of eight guy wires supporting a high-tension electric line pole on Fair street near Delta place were reported by officials of the Georgia Power Company to have been deliberately severed at about 9:30 o'clock Monday night by unknown persons using bolt cutters, part of the standard equipment of power company linemen. The transmission "tee" connecting Boulevard, Moreland and Grady, and bearing 19,000 volts, became entangled with the cut guy wires, causing a momentary stoppage of service in one of the city's most important areas and igniting the pole, the officials said.

Two of three guy wires bracing another pole at Howell Mill road and Bishop street also were cut Monday night, the company announced, but no damage resulted as the wires did not come into contact with the transmission lines. The blazing pole on Fair street was extinguished by city firemen and service was resumed with little inconvenience to the public, though current supplied to industrial users was knocked out for several hours while the damage was being repaired.

Sunday night a mysterious explosion in a power company manhole at Stewart avenue and Glen street caused no material damage, the cable lines not being affected by the blast.

WALLACE McPHERSON ALSTON. McGeachy, Other members of the commission, of which Dr. J. G. Patton, of College Park, is chairman, are the Rev. D. P. McGeachy, Jr., and A. L. Marks.

Mr. Alston, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Alston, of 212 Winona drive, has been acting as instructor in the seminary and is occupying temporarily the pulpit at Ingleside and Midway churches. After his marriage to Miss Madeline Dunseith, of Clearwater, Fla., scheduled for early summer, he is expected to accept one of numerous offers he has had from churches in Georgia and neighboring states. He is a graduate of Emory University and has done special work in Chicago University and in Union Seminary, New York. The public is invited to the ordination ceremonies.

ATLANTA U. CAMPAIGN INDORSED BY ALUMNI

Efforts of Atlanta University trustees to raise funds for current operating expenses were indorsed at a meeting of the school alumni in Ward Memorial chapel, A. T. Walden, president, announced Tuesday. Graduates and former students were urged to make as large financial contributions as possible before the close of the present school year. Appointment of committees to arrange for the annual business meeting and to plan for future publication of the alumni organ, the Crimson and Gray, was announced.

Key Fails as Collector, Pay Checks To Be Late
James L. Key may be a "white" a mayor, but he is a decided flop as a bill collector.

As a result of his failure Tuesday to get $152,000 from the state of Georgia, 3,000 borough employees must wait about a week for their pay checks due May 1. B. Graham West, comptroller, who was a party to the attempted collection, said: "The state owes Atlanta $152,000 as its unpaid balance of school funds for 1928-29, and the mayor, backed by West, invaded the state executive's sanctum Tuesday with a view of getting the money."

Dr. L. G. Hardman, governor, informed the mayor and his aides that there is nothing the state can do at this time.

"We owe every other city in the state," the governor said, "and cannot pay them."

Atlanta has only about $200,000 in cash to meet pay roll demands amounting to about $375,000, West said.

208 DEATHS ARE LAID TO POISON ALCOHOL

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—A wave of 208 deaths during the winter attributed directly to the drinking of wood alcohol or synthetic methanol was disclosed today by the bureau of industrial alcohol.

Commissioner Doran said an even greater number of deaths believed due to a similar cause were under investigation, but that 208 already had been certified through an elaborate survey of state officials and coroners.

The investigation has been under way for months. It was undertaken to determine whether there was improper handling of completely denatured alcohol, made under government supervision.

Where we found between 12 and 15 deaths due to the drinking of completely denatured alcohol made before our non-poisonous denaturant was adopted January 1, Dr. Doran said, "we discovered 208 had died from drinking wood alcohol or the anti-freeze solution made from synthetic methanol, neither of which are under government control."

According to federal officials, many people who had formerly drunk anti-freeze solutions made from completely denatured alcohol, containing 4 per cent of poisonous wood alcohol, unwittingly turned to the new and cheaper solution made from synthetic methanol. The wood alcohol content of the latter in many instances aggregates 75 per cent.

RITES HELD HERE BY HORSE TRADERS

The combination burial service reunion which has been the custom for years in that group of wandering southerners known as the Irish Horse Traders, was held in Atlanta Tuesday. From all over the south, families connected with the famous band, flocked to the Church of the Immaculate Conception where the Rev. J. E. Moyn conducted the final service for three of their number who had died the previous year.

Those to whom the last tribute was paid were Tom Mack, 62, who died in Cairo, December 27; J. J. Carroll, 50, who died in Savannah, October 13; Pat Gorman, 19, who died in Memphis. The procession proceeded to West View cemetery where interment took place, and the Rev. Moyn gave a little talk to the assemblage reviewing the origin of the group and its annual burying custom.

REV. J. H. JOHNSTON DIES AT HOME HERE

The Rev. John H. Johnston, 69, an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church for the past 40 years, died Tuesday at the residence, 1568 Evans drive. Ordained as a minister in 1891, Mr. Johnston worked without a salary for 38 of the 40 years that he served the church. He spent most of his time among the smaller groups, reviving declining parishes, rebuilding memberships and giving his social service. He thought the most good could be effected.

He was one of the youngest members of the state senate in the first year of his ministry and in that year married Miss Louisa C. Chambers, of Canton, who survives him. In addition, he is survived by a son, Glenn Johnston, and a sister, Mrs. Madison Phillips, of Tyler; a brother, Warren S. Cook, of St. Louis, and a granddaughter, Miss Muriel Johnston, of Atlanta. Funeral arrangements will be announced when completed by H. M. Patterson & Son.

M. E. HOSPITAL BODY WILL GATHER MAY 2

The executive committee of the general hospital board of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, will meet in Savannah, Ga., Saturday, May 2, to consider plans for erection of a medical arts building in connection with the Warren A. Candler hospital there, recently acquired by the board. The meeting, it was announced by Fred T. Barnett, associate secretary of the board, will be held at 10 a. m. in the office of Gordon L. Groover, of the Citizens and Southern National bank, president of the board of trustees of the hospital.

The general hospital board, meeting here last week, authorized the executive committee to investigate the proposal of Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, general secretary of the board, with subject to final approval by the general board, take all steps necessary to starting the project, should it be found feasible.

If the executive committee approves the project after receiving cost estimates and signing tentative leases with prospective tenants, the general board will be called to meet in Savannah to pass finally on the matter.

Blaming politics for the lack of an adequate administration building (a need which now seems about to be supplied) and warning his hearers that unless such a structure is provided in the very near future Atlanta probably will lose the government agencies now located at Candler field, Councilman Joseph E. Berman, chairman of council's aviation committee, Tuesday painted the picture of future air travel for members of the Lions Club. Speaking at the weekly luncheon of the organization, Berman predicted that within a decade air travel will be as commonplace as use of the railroad now is.

Berman is author of a proposal now pending before the finance committee (it will be considered at a meeting Friday morning) to empower private interests to erect a $50,000 building in which all supplementary agencies at the field would be concentrated. "If Candler field were privately owned," Berman told the Lions, "there would be adequate administration facilities there now, but because it is municipally operated and some of us are slow to realize the possibilities and advantages of air travel, we have no building. Birmingham will dedicate its $1,000,000 airport and open a new $80,000 administration building the last of next month. If Atlanta fails to provide housing facilities for government bureaus now at Candler field, they probably will be moved to Birmingham, which is offering spacious quarters in its new building for the agencies."

Petrel Follies of 1931, Brighter Than Ever, Opens Two-Night Stand at Erlanger Tonight

FOUR ATLANTA GIRLS WHO WILL APPEAR IN THE PETREL FOLLIES, OPENING TONIGHT.

The Petrel Follies will be bigger and brighter than ever this season. And for good reasons, as witness the above four. There will be 22 scenes, in which a cast of 75 will participate. Thanks to the direction of Earl Blackwell, author and producer of the Petrel Follies, everything promises to move with snap and pep.

Tickets have been on sale at the Erlanger box office since Monday, and advance reports indicate that the "S. R. O." sign will be out before the curtain rises on the first sketch. Funds derived from the show will go to the Oglethorpe University endowment.

If you miss a good show, don't say you were not warned!

ROGERS ARRIVES

way string along with Stimson. The main defect of his policy is that it's badly worded, for he says in it what everybody knows, that the government can't send along a marine with every peddler who ventures into the interior of that God-forsaken country. It ain't practical.

Aside from his criticism of Secretary Stimson as a stylist, Mr. Rogers was cordial in his praise of that dignitary. "We're good friends; I met him at the disarmament conference in London. You remember the disarmament conference? It was a great social success."

Coming down on the plane he bequeathed the time by reading Secretary Stimson's book on Nicaragua, which is just off the press, and which was autographed and presented to Mr. Rogers Monday in the course of a friendly visit to the secretary of state's office. "It is a good book," he says.

"Likes" Democrats' Chances. Now about the Democrats. Mr. Rogers thinks they'll be pretty well running things before long, if present conditions are unchanged. But when he had got to the point of discussing the Democrats, you could see that the telegram to Mrs. Rogers was weighing heavily on his mind. "Suppose we finish down in the lobby," he said.

But the telegraph office in the lobby was closed and, while everybody stared at him, Mr. Rogers insisted on knowing where the central office was. "You can get a messenger boy or have your wire phoned in from the desk," he was reminded. But, no; not this wire; he was going to see to it personally. And he did.

During the stroll down Forsyth street, the reporter hazarded one more question. "Was that party who called him up during the course of the interview and kept him on the phone for such a unconscionably long time, a friend or just a local fan?" "I never heard of her before," he replied. "But she said she was from Santa Monica. That's where I live."

You either like him or you don't, but one thing you will have to admit: that Will Rogers is a fact, not a pose. He is genuinely the naive and friendly person you meet in print and on the screen. When he alighted Tuesday afternoon from an Eastern Air Transport plane, just in from Washington, it was with a characteristic drollery: "This plane oughter been here an hour ago."

All Travel Tedious. Not that the plane was late; in fact, it was on the stroke of time, but for Will Rogers—just in from a three weeks' air tour of goodness knows how many Central American countries—even the swiftest mode of transportation is somewhat tedious. It is the sort of life he leads; here today, in the Antipodes tomorrow. He will be in Fort Worth tonight and on the night after in California—home.

"How long are you going to stay, Mr. Rogers?" demanded a sweet young thing, member of the unofficial welcoming committee which turned out to greet the famous humorist. "Pshaw, I'll be in California day after tomorrow," he replied. But aren't you going to stay long enough to see Atlanta?" someone persisted. "I've done seen Stone mountain," he countered, "and the federal prison. What else have you got?"

"How did the mountain look?" he was asked. Mr. Rogers shook his head sadly. "It looks like somebody's been tryin' to tear it down," he said.

HARDMAN, MATTHEWS LAUD KEY'S EFFORTS

Mayor James L. Key's effort to obtain a full and unconditional title to the State memorial scarp on which to carve a granite memorial to Confederate heroes Tuesday was given the unqualified endorsement of Governor L. G. Hardman and Commissioner C. A. Matthews, of DeKalb county.

Both officials, in letters to J. Lawrence McCord, chairman of an Atlanta Chamber of Commerce committee on Stone mountain, expressed the hope that work will be resumed on the monument within a short time, but stated that in their opinion it cannot be prosecuted successfully without an unconditional deed vested in the public.

The governor's letter follows: "With reference to the completion of the memorial at Stone mountain, to the sailors and soldiers of the Confederacy, will state that I have been keenly interested from its inception and am now ready to help in any way that lies within my power."

"However, from my knowledge of the past history of this movement it would be a useless undertaking unless a title to the property is vested in the public, and also an amount of land and granite sufficient to protect the memorial for all time."

"Sincerely yours," "L. G. HARDMAN, Governor."

Commissioner Matthews' letter follows: "In answer to your inquiry as to my attitude with reference to the completion of the Stone mountain memorial to the soldiers and sailors of the south, will state that this movement has always been of keen interest to all of the citizens of DeKalb county, inasmuch as it is located in our county."

"It is needless for me to say that I have been keenly disappointed in the endless delay and I will assure all those interested that this movement has always been of keen interest to all of the citizens of DeKalb county, inasmuch as it is located in our county."

"I would state further that his honor, Mayor James L. Key, of Atlanta, is to be commended for his effort to revive and complete this great memorial so dear to all southerners. His idea of vesting the unconditional title to the property in the public is in my opinion sound and the only way, in my judgment, the movement will interest the public sufficiently to contribute to its construction."

"Very truly yours," "C. A. MATTHEWS, Commissioner of Roads and Revenues."

FINAL RITES TODAY FOR C. A. BELLE ISLE

Funeral services for C. A. Belle Isle, who was found Monday morning hanging from the transom of a door in the Atlanta Opportunity school, will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the chapel of Harry G. Pool, the Rev. Fred Glisson officiating. Interment will be in College Park cemetery.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death, and Coroner Paul Doney gave the statement that there was not enough evidence to support the theory of suicide due to the fact that his death was caused by a broken neck instead of by strangulation, as at first believed by police.

NEW SEWER PLAN STUDY IS PLANNED

All Details Will Be Considered Before Submission to City Council.

Painstaking study of the proposed legislative enactment to establish a sewer district for Atlanta and its environs will precede its submission to council for ratification, it was indicated Tuesday afternoon by the sewer committee of council in ordering a revised draft of the measure sent to all members of the committee.

Copies will be provided by Clarke Donaldson, chief of construction, and they will be studied carefully before the next session of the committee, May 12. A special meeting of the committee following that session is probable, at which time all details will be considered.

The committee Tuesday afternoon voted to lay lateral sewers in the streets subject to councilmatic ratification at its session Monday afternoon.

CHANGE APPROVED BY RUSSELL BOARD

tate the writing of a single line of such a reorganization bill. This work can be carried out in the T. H. House only by forgetting personalities, and that there is such a thing as political patronage. If it is sought to protect any friend or punish any man who has incurred personal displeasure, all efforts, however strenuous, will go to naught."

The governor-elect emphasized the confidence he had in the members of the commission, commending their "ability, integrity and patriotism and the spirit of unselfishness I know will guide them in their deliberations."

"Without being presumptuous," he said, addressing the committee, "I would like to suggest your most careful investigation of the method of collecting taxes in our state and the method by which tax money is expended. Tax money is the life blood of the state and every detail of its collection should be carefully coordinated and supervised and the method of expenditure of public funds should be doubly checked and guarded."

"As for myself, without any thought of paying political debts or providing machinery at the taxpayers' expense for use in seeking political power or preferment, without enemies to punish or friends to reward, I pledge the committee my wholehearted support of the plan that will be the result of their efforts. I bespeak for the committee the interest and assistance of all the people of Georgia. They hold my pledge and thereby of the next administration that a senseless and untiring effort will be made to reorganize the state government so that the expense of its operation shall be reduced."

Heads Pledge Co-operation.
Featured by the response of Secretary of State Carswell, for his department, to the invitation to officials to air their views, 32 heads of departments or boards assured the committee of their co-operation in its efforts.

For this assurance, the committee, through Chairman Peterson, late Tuesday said that it appreciated the expressions of confidence and the offers of assistance tendered.

James A. Perry, chairman of the public service commission, who also was defeated by Russell for the nomination, pledged the governor-elect his cordial co-operation during the next administration.

Carswell's speech, because of its utter frankness and homely humor, evoked as much applause as did that of the governor-elect. He admitted, at the outset, that his department had too many employees.

"But," he asked the committee and

Clear, Warmer Weather Seen For City Today

Fair weather will remain with Atlanta today and possibly through Thursday, C. F. von Herrmann, United States meteorologist, said Tuesday.

Mr. von Herrmann said there is no rain in sight, and all other disturbing elements are absent from the weather map at present, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

"Temperatures today will be slightly higher," the weather man said. Tuesday's minimum was 44 degrees and the maximum was 66. Today the mercury will range between 50 and 70 degrees, he said.

all in hearing distance, "what am I going to do, and what are these other fellows going to do, when representatives and senators and other state officials bring their suits and coats, and their hats, and their umbrellas, and their jobs? A man's got to be inhuman to resist some of them."

"I am heartily in accord," he said, "with this committee in trying to remodel this Georgia government. The state today is run more like a negro Baptist association than anything I know of. All a governor can do, if he is a good one, is to deliver a memorial day address on Sunday and pardon a few bootleggers on Thursday."

"You ought to give the governor more power and authority. There should be more co-operation between the executive and the departments. The departments have too much latitude in this direction and the governor has none."

"You gentlemen," Carswell continued, "have a great work ahead of you. You might begin by stopping this business of drawing three or four salaries. Take my own case. As secretary of state I have been drawing $2,000 per year by the grace of the appropriations committee—there is no constitutional provision for any salary. Then get $150 per month as motor vehicle commissioner and $100 per month as corporation commissioner. Altogether, I get about $3,000."

He condemned the practice of "three or four inspectors" from as many departments, collecting in Georgia cities at the expense of the taxpayers, "when one of them could attend to the work all four are sent there to do."

One of the state's troubles with respect to any plan for reorganization, Carswell added, is that the state has been run by the departments with powerful political patronage. He declared that the governor was helpless against this combined influence.

"The secretary of state," he concluded, "has no business being motor vehicle commissioner. He is supposed to rank somewhere close to the governor and be a man of dignity. With this tin tag business he's in though you make him a sort of competitor with a mail order house."

While all state officials and representatives of the girls' training school and two junior colleges were on hand, the absence of Chancellor Charles M. Snelling, of the University of Georgia, and Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the state college of agriculture, brought comment from the committee.

Regrets Educators' Absence.
"I want to say publicly," Representative J. T. Colson, of Glynn, said, "that I regret that an institution which expends more than $2,000,000 of the $12,000,000 which goes into the treasury is not represented at this hearing."

Representative W. J. Crowe, secretary, said that both Chancellor Snelling and Dr. Soule had been notified of the open hearing Tuesday.

Governor-elect Russell informed the committee that both college officials had asked him if it was imperative for them to be on hand and that he had answered by saying that while, in his opinion—not given as a member of the committee—their presence was not imperative he felt that the committee would like for them to be present.

Officials Present.
Officials who assured the committee of a willingness to co-operate in the general scheme of reorganization were M. L. Dugan, state superintendent of schools; Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, state health commissioner; Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture; Hal M. Stanley, chairman of the industrial commission; William B. Harrison, comptroller general; James A. Perry, chairman of the Georgia public service commission; J. O. Anderson, for the state treasurer; George White, of the Georgia Training School for Girls, on Cascade road; H. T. McIntosh, of Albany, for the same institution; R. E. Matheson, commissioner of revenue; J. W. Barnett, chairman of the state highway board; Judge E. L. Rainey and Judge G. A. Johns, for the state prison commission; R. C. Norman, state tax commissioner; A. B. Mobley, superintendent of banks; Peter S. Twitty, state game and fish commissioner; Tom Wisdom, state auditor and advisory member of the committee; Miss Ella Mae Thornton, state librarian; R. De T. Lawrence, state pension commissioner; J. G. CHARGES AGAINST MAYOR WALKER ARE DISMISSED

From George U. Harvey, borough president of Queens and the only republican holding high office in the city, came approval of the decision. "I am very glad to hear that the charges have been dismissed," he said. The text of the governor's decision follows:

"The governor of the state has the power under the constitution or under city charters to remove certain specified county or city officials. Under these powers, every year that passes sees many charges brought to the governor asking him to remove public officers. The governor, on receipt of such charges, can do one of three things: he can decide to take no action on the charges; he can invite the official complained against to submit his version of the charges complained about; or he can take evidence concerning the charges either in person or by a commissioner appointed by him. The decision as to which course to follow is exclusively an executive function."

"In the present case the governor has followed the second course above enumerated, and has sent the charges to the mayor of New York city. The mayor has submitted to him an answer in which he sets forth his version of his conduct in respect to the charges made. Both the original complaint and the mayor's reply have been widely printed in the public press. They are made a part of this decision."

Rights of People Upheld.
"It has ever been a fundamental principle of our government that the people of the state and of our various communities shall be allowed to exercise without restriction the right to select whomsoever they see fit to fill elective offices. The greatest caution must, therefore, be used in the exercise either of the impeachment power by the legislature or the removal power by the governor, in order not to annul the deliberate decision of the voters of the state or of any municipality thereof. Otherwise, precedent might be established by which the will of the electorate might be set aside for partisan advantage or for personal advantage on the part of a legislative majority or an unscrupulous governor."

"The impeachment and removal powers were created primarily in order to meet conditions where a public official, after election by the people, betrays his trust by act or corruption, criminality or incompetence."

"In the case before me, the principal allegations relate to acts and conduct of subordinate officials of the public officer complained against. When the charges are of this nature it must clearly appear either that the various acts and wrongdoings complained of are the part of the subordinate officials were known by the mayor and that he failed to take steps to correct or punish such wrongdoing or that he was negligent and recreant in failing to keep himself properly advised."

"I have given the charges and the reply my most earnest consideration, keeping always in mind the principles above set forth which must guide a governor in his decision. I do not find sufficient justification in these documents as submitted to remove the mayor of the city of New York, or to proceed further in the matter of these charges."

NO COMMENT IS MADE
AT G. O. P. HEADQUARTERS
BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(UP)—News that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt has refused to remove Mayor James J. Walker of New York and dismissed charges of misfeasance against him was received with much interest in republican party circles here because of its possible effect in the 1932 presidential contest.

Roosevelt leads most polls concerning the next democratic presidential nomination. Republicans therefore are hopeful that the investigation of conditions in New York city will in some way react to place the stamp of "Tammany" on Roosevelt, for that label becomes political poison in many sections. Several weeks ago Senator Wesley L. Jones, republican, Washington, suggested that Governor Roosevelt was prevented by Tammany from taking drastic action in the New York city scandals. Democratic national committee headquarters issued a statement charging the republican committee was trying to link Roosevelt with Tammany.

Senator Simon D. Fess, chairman of the republican national committee, declined to comment today on the dismissal of the charges against Walker. He said he did not wish to appear to be rushing in to make political capital of the matter. "That, it may be said, will be properly attended to a little later."

Roosevelt, for all of his strength now, is in a difficult position. He has strength. Some of those highest in the democratic organization have discovered it out in the country and it has caused a marked cooling off in the fervor of some democrats for Owen D. Young.

But Roosevelt's strength has a good many strings tied to it. Unless he can go into the convention with New York state solidly behind him he faces trouble. That means Tammany must be with him. Tammany must feel rather grateful toward Roosevelt tonight. His troubles are not over, but no matter how bad they are, they can't be as bad as they would have been if Roosevelt had removed Walker. For several weeks the word circulating here has been that the New York democratic organization, both upstate and Tammany, would go down the line for Roosevelt next year.

John J. Raskob, chairman of the democratic national committee, whose strategy has been opposed by Roosevelt, is not regarded as an important factor in New York politics.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith also has much less influence in the New York political organization than is generally supposed but his tremendous personal popularity and his general influence on many party workers scattered over the country, make him a powerful factor. Smith has not said whether he favors the nomination of Roosevelt. This has led to the belief among many that Smith himself wishes to be the candidate.

A fight between them would be a historic event in the democratic party because it would be the tragic chapter in a remarkable political partnership. Three times Franklin Roosevelt placed Smith in nomination at democratic national conventions. In 1923 Smith persuaded Roosevelt to run for governor in New York. Roosevelt was elected while Smith lost the state. Though they started with common policies, they see almost nothing of each other now.

Roosevelt pleases many southern democrats because he has an early anti-Tammany record and because in some way the feeling has spread around that while he finally took a position last year for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, he was not enthusiastically wet. In these times when several of the democratic presidential aspirants are boasting of their wringing wetness, one who seems to be a little reluctant about it and who stresses economic issues more, is viewed as a friend at heart. Most of all the south is looking at these New York chieftains with wonder without which no democrat has much chance of reaching the White House.

Some have urged Roosevelt to cut all strings with Tammany and strike out vigorously against the New York city machine as did Tilden and Cleveland. Thus far Roosevelt has revealed himself as too agreeable a person to use a tomahawk.

Clear, Warmer Weather Seen For City Today

Fair weather will remain with Atlanta today and possibly through Thursday, C. F. von Herrmann, United States meteorologist, said Tuesday.

Mr. von Herrmann said there is no rain in sight, and all other disturbing elements are absent from the weather map at present, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

"Temperatures today will be slightly higher," the weather man said. Tuesday's minimum was 44 degrees and the maximum was 66. Today the mercury will range between 50 and 70 degrees, he said.

all in hearing distance, "what am I going to do, and what are these other fellows going to do, when representatives and senators and other state officials bring their suits and coats, and their hats, and their umbrellas, and their jobs? A man's got to be inhuman to resist some of them."

"I am heartily in accord," he said, "with this committee in trying to remodel this Georgia government. The state today is run more like a negro Baptist association than anything I know of. All a governor can do, if he is a good one, is to deliver a memorial day address on Sunday and pardon a few bootleggers on Thursday."

"You ought to give the governor more power and authority. There should be more co-operation between the executive and the departments. The departments have too much latitude in this direction and the governor has none."

"You gentlemen," Carswell continued, "have a great work ahead of you. You might begin by stopping this business of drawing three or four salaries. Take my own case. As secretary of state I have been drawing $2,000 per year by the grace of the appropriations committee—there is no constitutional provision for any salary. Then get $150 per month as motor vehicle commissioner and $100 per month as corporation commissioner. Altogether, I get about $3,000."

He condemned the practice of "three or four inspectors" from as many departments, collecting in Georgia cities at the expense of the taxpayers, "when one of them could attend to the work all four are sent there to do."

One of the state's troubles with respect to any plan for reorganization, Carswell added, is that the state has been run by the departments with powerful political patronage. He declared that the governor was helpless against this combined influence.

"The secretary of state," he concluded, "has no business being motor vehicle commissioner. He is supposed to rank somewhere close to the governor and be a man of dignity. With this tin tag business he's in though you make him a sort of competitor with a mail order house."

CLEMENTS ASSUMES ALL MURDER GUILT

Telfair Youth Tells Officers He Alone Is Responsible in Clegg Death.

MACON, Ga., April 28.—(AP)—De Lois Clements, 19-year-old son of J. H. Clements, Telfair county's representative-elect in the state legislature, tonight told Bibb county officers, the latter reported, that he alone killed his father's best friend, Luther J. Clegg, near McRae, Ga., on the night of April 8, and after robbing the body and taking Mr. Clegg's automobile, he went back the next morning and hid the body. He said that no one else was implicated in the tragedy.

The latest confession of Clements came a few hours after a previous confession had implicated A. D. Ashley, 20-year-old son of a Telfair county farmer, and which had brought about Ashley's arrest.

Other confessions previously made had resulted in the arrest of Alvin Johnson, 34, father of three motherless children, and two negroes.

Today's confession, officers announced, was made in the presence of Luther J. Stevens, Bibb county deputy and John C. Ashley, Jr., deputy. Stevens said tonight that Johnson, Ashley and the negroes held him for release as soon as authority comes from Telfair county. All are still held on warrants charging murder, however.

"The devil was in me," Clements was quoted as saying when asked why he desired to implicate four innocent persons in the crime.

"Now I know I'm going to the electric chair."

The youth maintaining the discharge of the gun which killed the merchant was accidental.

Wife Gives Husband Honor Both Deserved

TIFTON, Ga., April 28.—The unique case of husband and wife being tied for valentines honors at the Georgia State College for Men has been settled by the modest withdrawal of Mrs. Carle W. Collins in favor of her husband.

Mr. Collins has worked his own and his wife's way through college. Mrs. Collins has had the duties of a housekeeper and mother on her. Both have taken a prominent part in student activities, yet both bettered all previous academic records at this institution.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins are to receive the B. S. and A. B. degrees, respectively, at the June commencement exercises.

JUDGE HENRY M'ALPIN, OF SAVANNAH, PASSES

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 28.—(AP)—Henry M'Alpin, judge of the court of ordinary of Chatham county since November 14, 1901, died this morning unexpectedly of a heart attack just after breakfast at his country home, Idle Wild, near Savannah.

He was born August 4, 1860, in Savannah, was a graduate of Princeton University, and attended Columbia University and University of Georgia law schools.

He was a past grand master of Odd Fellows in Georgia and prominent as an Elk, Eagle and Knight of Pythias. As a young man he was captain of the Georgia Hussars, troop A of Georgia cavalry. He was also president of St. Andrews Society, and member of a family distinguished in Savannah's history.

He was married three times and is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Mary M. Taylor, of Augusta, Ga., a daughter, Mrs. Frank Whitney, of New York, a child by a former marriage, and two sisters, Mrs. Val Walker, of Atlanta, and Mrs. J. W. Schley, Savannah. His funeral will likely be held Thursday afternoon.

Judge M'Alpin was one of the owners of the Hermitage, widely known ante-bellum estate near Savannah.

SAUSSY MAY SUCCEED M'ALPIN AS ORDINARY

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 28.—(AP)—The Morning News will say tomorrow that the death of Judge Henry M'Alpin, of the court of ordinary, today, makes it necessary for the board of county commissioners to select a new judge.

Judge George T. Cann, county attorney, said today under the most recent law, the appointee would serve until an election was held, and this latter could be any time within the next six months.

The most likely candidate for the judgeship is Mayor Gordon Saussy, who has had the ambition for this office for some time, having been a candidate several years ago. Political circles are convinced that Mayor Saussy will make the race. He declined today to say anything, this being in reference to Judge M'Alpin, who was his personal friend.

In the event of Mayor Saussy leaving the municipality, city council will elect its new mayor. Political talk today had three names mentioned: Thomas M. Hoynes, former mayor and now president of the Chamber of Commerce; Chairman J. P. Sullivan, of city council, and Vice Chairman of Council H. Lee Fulton, Jr. Mr. Hoynes declined to run for mayor more this year because of his duties as district manager of the Standard Oil Company and his inability to give full time to the mayor's job.

Georgia Woman, Seventy, Dies Without Seeing Electric Light

WAYCROSS, Ga., April 28.—Miss Mary E. Lowther, 70, pioneer citizen of Charlton county, a member of the old school of settlers who took little stock in new-fangled modes and fashions, died at her home near Folkston last Saturday and was buried Sunday at the Lowther family burying grounds.

Miss Lowther knew little of the modern things of life, but was considered an authority on pioneer history of this section. She had never visited a city larger than Folkston and had been to that town but twice in her life. She had never seen an electric light, and never set foot in a railroad train, according to her family. She died at her old home place, within a few yards of the place where she was born almost three-quarters of a century ago.

Her home was located directly on the air mail route between Atlanta and Jacksonville, and although she lived entirely in the past and cared little for the newer inventions, she was fascinated by the daily roar of the fast overhead mail.

She is survived by one brother, J. A. Lowther, of Brantley county, and one sister, Mrs. H. Harris, of Charlton county.

The last rites were held from the residence conducted by the Rev. Herbert Thornton, of Hoboken. Pallbearers were J. G. Crews, J. A. Crews, W. P. Anderson, Lambert Jones, Otis Wainwright and Hubert Anderson.

Bonus Aids Negro Man Who Didn't Fight—Yet

CORDELE, Ga., April 28.—John Henry Dixon, negro, was on the chain gang and the warm spring days began to bear on him mightily. He wanted liberty and he wanted it bad. Came the bonus and solved John Henry's problem, and this is how.

Before John Henry broke the law he had taken unto himself a common-law wife. She returned to her legal husband, the man the minister had married her to, and won her way back into his favor. He entrusted to her several hundred dollars to release John Henry. She and John Henry's mother worked it out together and the sheriff's office was paid the necessary dollars to release John Henry. She purchased herself a hat, shoes and clothes and, together with John Henry, she caught a train. Today her husband is mourning the loss of his money and vowing vengeance on the pair.

And that's how the bonus served John Henry, who did not fight, but who may have to yet.

He is fighting extradition papers and the hearing Saturday before Judge S. K. Hawkins will determine whether he shall be sent to face trial in Alabama. A. Edward Smith, Macon, assistant district attorney, will represent the government at the hearing.

LEARNING TO CLIMB.
BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Some learn to walk; some learn to fly;
And some to climb first have to try.
—Yellow Wing the Flicker.

Those young Flickers in the telegraph pole grew very fast, but it was to be expected. I know of nothing in the Great World that grows faster than does a young bird. It wasn't long before they were crowded in that house which had seemed so large when it had been finished by their parents. Then one day when Mrs. Yellow Wing returned with a mouthful of food she was surprised and delighted to see two bills sticking out of the doorway. That was a proud moment for her, and she knew such a moment as your mother knew when you first crept. You see, it meant that two babies had begun to climb.

Now, the first thing that some babies learn is how to creep. It is so with most human babies. There are other babies who first learn to walk, some who first learn to hop, and very few who, like baby Hummingbirds, fly without learning to use their feet first, and some who learn to climb before they either walk, hop or fly. It is this way with young Flickers. The two whose bills were thrust out of the doorway had climbed up the inside wall of their house and Mrs. Yellow Wing knew that it wouldn't be long now before they would be wanting to climb outside.

Now, in any large family there is bound to be a difference among the children. Some will be bold; others will be timid. Some will be headstrong; others will be obedient. Some will be ambitious; others will be lazy. It was just so in the big family of young Flickers. Yellow Wing came hurrying home one day to find three outside of the house, clinging to the telegraph pole, their eyes wide with wonder as they gazed around at the Great World. Two more were peeping out of the doorway. Mrs. Yellow Wing came hurrying up. Two were fed and then their mouths being free, Yellow Wing and Mrs. Yellow Wing began to talk over what had best be done.

"I hope no more will venture out until these have learned to fly a little," said Yellow Wing. "If all should be out here at the same time and an enemy happened along we would be sure to lose one of them at least."

"You go look for some more food," retorted Mrs. Yellow Wing, "and stop your worrying. While you are gone I'll give the dears a few hints on how to use their feet and tails."

So Yellow Wing flew off to hunt for food and Mrs. Yellow Wing began a game of dodge-around-the-pole with the three young Flickers who were outside. Presently they were joined by two more, the two who had been looking out the doorway. It was great fun chasing each other around that pole and up and down it. All the time without knowing it they were learning to climb. When Yellow Wing returned he joined in the fun and Mrs. Yellow Wing went to hunt for food.

All afternoon those five young Flickers climbed about on that telegraph pole. Just before the Black Shadow came creeping out from the Purple Hills they went back into the safety of their home, tired but filled with a great desire to see more of the Great World and scornful of the four who had not yet ventured out. 3 REALTY DEALS INVOLVE $300,000

Commercial Downtown Property, Apartment House and Peachtree Lot Included.

Marked revival of the local real estate market was indicated in three important property sales reported Tuesday, coming on the heels of other large realty deals consummated in the past few days. The Tuesday transactions involved real estate valuations of approximately $300,000, including commercial property in the heart of the financial section, a large apartment house and a 275-foot vacant parcel on Peachtree road with construction developments planned for the latter.

Sale of the Park Court apartments on Piedmont avenue by Frank Hawkins, well known banker, to W. L. Randall, prominent fuel dealer and capitalist, was announced by the purchaser. While the consideration was withheld, it was understood to be about $100,000, several residential parcels being included as part payment.

The Park Court apartment structure contains 41 units and has an annual income capacity of approximately $26,000. It is located on the corner of Piedmont avenue and Thirteenth street and fronts 130 feet on the former, with a depth of 200 feet along Thirteenth. Mr. Randall recently figured in another large realty transaction when he purchased the twin Kenilworth and Ivanhoe apartments on Ponce de Leon avenue from Solomon Malsman, consummation of which was announced Monday.

Mr. Hawkins was a principal in a second of the Tuesday transactions, which was understood to have involved an amount in the neighborhood of the first transaction. In this instance he was the purchaser, acquiring the commercial structure on Marietta street, adjoining the Palmer building, located on the north side of the block between Forsyth and Broad streets, from the McMillan heirs, it was reported.

The Rogers grocery system received its weekly visit from bandits Tuesday night when the store at 1038 Capitol avenue, S. W., was robbed of $35, police said. J. B. Sutton, of 831 Courtney drive, the manager, said that he was alone in the store when two white men came in, one of them covering him with a revolver while the other opened the cash register. H. F. Pannell, of 51 Haygood avenue, who was passing at the time, grabbed the bandit who had the cash, but when the other robber, who was armed with a pistol, started shooting, Pannell released his quarry.

of brown straw and a dark coat of about the same shade. His majesty was dressed in formal afternoon clothes. With such precision had the ceremonies been arranged that only seven minutes were consumed in going from the train to the waiting automobiles. Those who were watching many receptions to celebrities here said that was a record.

When the king and queen reached the Massena hotel, they were loaned to them by Larz Anderson, former ambassador to Japan—they found another crowd lining the curbs, waiting to receive them. Bowing and smiling, as they had done all along the route, they drove through the white marble gates to the doorway of the mansion.

On advice of his physicians, the king tonight decided to forego his planned trips tomorrow to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington and to the Washington home at Mt. Vernon. The doctor advised against exertion just before the king's examination in Baltimore, and Prince Svas-ti, the king's father-in-law, will make these pilgrimages in his place.

The king will speak over both the Columbia and National Broadcasting chains at 12:45 (Atlanta time) Wednesday.

HAD TO RUSH TO THE WINDOW TO GET HER BREATH

"I suffered with stomach trouble for years and never did get so I could eat without having indigestion until I took Sargon," said Mrs. V. R. Clure, Route 3, Lawrenceville.

"Such smothering spells came over me at night I'd have to jump out of bed and run to a window to get my breath. Sometimes headaches lasted for three days and nights without relief. Sargon not only ended every trace of indigestion and headaches, but it gave me a hearty appetite and more strength in my legs than I've had in years. The Sargon Pills keep my bowels regulated and my whole system is in splendid condition." Sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy Stores.—(adv.)

SECRET PLACES

BY JOAN SUTHERLAND

INSTALLMENT XXXIII.
"Yes, I remember," she said. And her mother went on: "I want him to paint you now," she explained. "I was sitting next to him at luncheon and he discussed it. Will you sit for him?"

Toni laid aside the book.
"Yes, if you would like me to . . . but why? What is the good of a portrait to you? I'm here myself and there is no one else"—and almost in a whisper she added—"now."

Her mother came over to her and kissed her, since she did not wish Toni to see her face at that moment, and then going on to the little raised platform by the window, stood looking out at the avenue through a blur of tears. When the blur passed and she was sure of herself she spoke cheerily.

"That is sweet of you, dear, for I know how irksome you find it. Ravel wants you to go to his studio, and suggested eleven tomorrow if you were willing to sit. I am going to telephone him now."

"Yes, please him," she said, quietly, and rose to go to her room. Once there, the studied calm of her face gave way, and clenching her hands, beat them against her forehead. . . . a portrait . . . and for whom? For Feodor? Twenty-five years of prison walls stretched into lonely old age . . . for her children? She would not have any. For her mother? Did Lady Alice really want it? Was there any satisfaction in the painting of a face and body when the heart and soul was dead within . . . ?

Standing in the middle of the floor, a shuddering agony seized her, convulsing her face, choking her with the tears she would not shed. . . . tears would never help again . . . they could not free Feodor, or ease by one lot the torment of his life . . . and since they could not aid the work, they should not aid her . . . she would not accept relief when relief was denied the man she loved.

With almost superhuman effort she fought back the anguish of emotion that for weeks had clamored for expression, but the battle wore her physical strength just a little more sorely each time, and left her little less of the life she no longer valued.

Ravel, opening the door to her on this January morning so early in the year, did not quite succeed in controlling his start—then hastily greeted her, drawing her into the warmth and light from the dark hall.

"I am more than delighted, Made-moiselle Toni," he said cordially, hiding his dismay. "When your mother telephoned me yesterday I was charmed. She is calling for you at half-past twelve, she tells me, so we must make a quick start."

He helped her off with her fur coat and her hat, ordered his man—Ravel was wealthy apart from his great success—to take them away, watched her comb the loose soft waves of fair hair, talked of his work and any details he thought might interest her, inwardly thinking to himself that there was a mere child dying by inches . . . dying in the prime of youth . . . and of a broken heart.

The sittings were less trying to Toni than she had expected; she sat easily in a great chair, her hands along the arms, her head a little bent forward, looking straight out of the picture a little away from and above the place where the painter stood, and into Ravel's mind flashed a title that to himself would always express it: the exquisite French expression of the closing years: Sur le retour.

"It is the only name for the portrait," he said late that night to Ronald when they met after the opera. "She is dying as surely as a flower dies when it is plucked. The source of life has been stopped—it is enough to break the heart to watch her eyes as I paint."

It was a week later, and the portrait was beginning to obsess its creator; Ravel realized that if Feodor's tragedy was to cost the life of this girl, it was also to give the opportunity of displaying his own genius to the world, for he knew as he drew near his completion that this picture was so incomparably finer than anything that he had ever done. And one morning, when Toni had telephoned to say she was delayed for a short while, his conviction was borne out oddly enough by the appearance at his studio of Gigi Berton, who insisted on being admitted when the admirable Guillaume tried to restrain her, and greeted Ravel with an impudent remark.

He was standing by the easel and nodded, with a casual brush-imposed: "Assieds-toi, Gigi—I am occupied for one moment here"—and went on with the retouching of a shadow at the foot of the chair.

Gigi, knowing his ways, watched him for a few minutes and then, growing impatient, went noiselessly round the walls, glancing at her over his shoulders till she came behind him, and then all her caution went to the winds, and she uttered a loud exclamation that was almost a cry.

"What have you done to her? You have broken her heart!"

Ravel's brush fell to the floor, and he wheeled round as Gigi sprang forward, her fists clenched, her eyes ablaze, just in time to catch her by the wrists and hold her off.

"Gigi, little fool, I have done nothing—I have only painted her! This—this little imbecile, do you think I would hurt one hair of her head?"

His tone was bantering, yet there was emotion behind it. Gigi might be a little gaudy, a little vain, but she was a girl to whom life had given a hard deal, but she knew something of the world in which she lived, she knew more than a little of his work, and he had started her out of all belief, his work . . . for her, the girl in the picture was a living thing.

Later, he told her briefly what had happened, and, to his surprise, Gigi not only listened intently, but interrupted him more than once with a pertinent question. When, however, he reached the trial and sentence, she stopped him curtly.

"But that is absurd even for so stupid a people as the English," she said. "Staire did not kill that man; he would not take it to trouble. He despised him. He would not run the risk of losing his own life and breaking"—she waved her hand toward the portrait—"her heart."

He did not shoot that sale type. Do you know who did? I think I can tell you. Would you like to know?"

"You?" Ravel stared. "You? What do you know of this affair?"

"Nothing—yet—that I could make you believe," she said. "But in here," she struck her chest with a quick gesture. "I am sure I know! And you shall know and so shall she—that pauvre petite there."

Amazed at her tone, at the look on her face, Ravel jumped up and, coming across to her chair, took her by the shoulders.

"What do you mean?" he said roughly. "Don't speak in riddles. Tell me what you mean—what you think . . ."

She looked up at him through narrowed lids, and in her eyes was a resolution that amazed him.

"Pas encore, mon ami," she said quietly, and in her whole manner was a calmness amazing in one of so excitable a temperament. "It is not the moment to explain. I must think. But you shall know this—all of you . . . that the one who killed was not Staire, but a woman."

Ravel passed a disturbed night. He could not think of anything but Gigi's extraordinary remark—a woman had killed D'Arblaye. What woman? He was at a loss to understand how she had got such an idea into her head. He would have dismissed the whole thing as the wildest nonsense, but Gigi was not apt to talk nonsense. He could not put the thing away from him. He could not decide what course of action to pursue. After all, the whole affair was none of his business, except in so far as it might mean a gross miscarriage of justice to remain silent, and yet what possible reason could Gigi have for saying that she believed a woman was guilty of the murder of D'Arblaye?

ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, 5 points up to 9.30; receipts 57; shipments 50; stock 165,539.

NEW YORK, April 28.—(P)—An early advance in cotton on steadiness in Liverpool and indications that the May notices were being promptly stopped, was followed today by reactions under realizing or liquidation promoted by the early weakness of the stock market. After selling off from 10.28 to 10.17 for July or about 8 points net lower, the market steadied on covering following rallies in stocks and July closed at 10.12. The general market closed steady net 2 points higher to 1 point lower.

Notices were issued against May contracts representing about 10,000 bales, according to estimates heard in the trade. Their circulation caused some further liquidation, but the cotton was quite readily taken, and differences narrowed somewhat during the day with May closing $1 points under December compared with 84 points at the close of the previous day. The failure of the prompt stopping of the notices to bring in a more general demand was probably a disappointment to recent buyers and may be accounted for some of the afternoon selling. The day's weather news was considered a little more favorable, but appeared to be without influence.

NEW ORLEANS SPOTS

SHOW LITTLE CHANGE

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—(P)—With only a moderate volume in trading, the cotton market here after an early gain of 6 to 7 points due to the reported prompt stopping of the May notices in New York prices turned down.

Today was first May notice day in the north; market and it was announced that about 70,000 bales were tendered there. After the effect of the stopping of the notices had been discounted the market eased off on selling by ring scalpers helped by an easier stock market and by uncertainty over the meaning of United States Steel directors after the close. Prices gradually declined to levels 15 points below the highs of the early morning close, and 7 to 9 points below the previous close. After trading in the late morning recovering to 10 points and closed steady, the general market being net unchanged to 2 points net higher for the day.

Stock Letters.

TENNER & BEANE.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Further evidence of an overall condition appeared in today's market. Although stocks moved erratically in earlier part of session bearish reaction to cotton news was in some directions met an effective check by virtue of the subnormal resistance developed in pivot issues.

The manner in which stocks have been taken during recent week points clearly indicates that a very considerable body of investors have while others acted relatively more cautiously. The latter group, however, brought out by downward attractiveness of representative issues as measured by standards of value, independent of purely immediate considerations.

DOBBE & CO.

NEW YORK, April 28.—In spite of heavy liquidation in a few issues which figure in some stock industrial averages, greater resistance to the downward movement was noticeable today and this alone suggests that a worthwhile rally is near at hand. The industrial averages declined about 11 points, compared with 25 points on Monday and 31 points last Saturday. Declaration of the regular dividend on United States Steel Company should serve to increase confidence to some extent. Carrying figures due today will show much greater improvement than generally anticipated. The short interest is large and rampant and the technical position is strong. We believe that the appearance of any additional unfavorable news would find it more difficult to absorb offerings in orderly manner.

BEER & CO.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Today's market again was irregular with acute weakness in some stocks and others acted relatively more cautiously. There were reports of large selling orders originate from investment trust sources.

Such rallies as appeared during the early part of the day were for the most part on a small volume, and did not carry very far. In the early afternoon there again appeared to be considerable short covering, but this was not sufficient to bring about a general recovery. A few other stocks toward the close cancelled a fair part of the decline.

The averages again were down over 4 points. After the close, declaration of the regular dividend on United States Steel Company was announced, together with the earnings report for the first quarter. This report, no doubt was anticipated by the steady selling which has been present in steel for some little time past. The declaration of the regular dividend to have been preceded to absorb offerings in orderly manner.

COURTS & CO.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Around noon today the market again showed a definite uptick. Estimates made covering the day's results on the basis of the midday closing showed a general recovery. The only requirements for a climax were moderately lower prices at the close. The market was not without some slight increase in trading activity. With these modest requirements to meet the market proceeded first to go down on the decline.

Highlights of Wall Street

BY CHARLES W. STORM, Editor, the News Service of Wall Street.

NEW YORK, April 28.—(NANA)

Stocks continued to be tossed around on the troubled seas of finance today and many issues sank to new low levels.

Liquidation continued to filter in from all parts of the country as well as Europe. Important groups continued their policy of making purchases only on a scale down. A rally appeared in the early part of the last hour but shortly before the close this was followed by another sinking spell, in the midst of which the market closed.

Transamerica and Union Carbide were the two weakest spots in the early trading. The former got under to a new low record price while the latter lost more than 4 points. Transamerica rallied substantially in the afternoon, but the recovery was not enough to bring it back to its former level.

Liverpool cables reported that covering and American buying had absorbed continental and Bombay liquidation in that market, but said Manchester was unsettled with lack of confidence in present goods prices. Exports today, 13,332; making 5,991,300 so far this season. Port receipts, 4,845; United States port stocks, 3,317,392.

NEW ORLEANS SPOTS

SHOW LITTLE CHANGE

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—(P)—With only a moderate volume in trading, the cotton market here after an early gain of 6 to 7 points due to the reported prompt stopping of the May notices in New York prices turned down.

Today was first May notice day in the north; market and it was announced that about 70,000 bales were tendered there. After the effect of the stopping of the notices had been discounted the market eased off on selling by ring scalpers helped by an easier stock market and by uncertainty over the meaning of United States Steel directors after the close. Prices gradually declined to levels 15 points below the highs of the early morning close, and 7 to 9 points below the previous close. After trading in the late morning recovering to 10 points and closed steady, the general market being net unchanged to 2 points net higher for the day.

Port receipts 4,845; for week 16,000; for season 8,611,340; last season 8,298,107; exports 12,272; for week 13,131; for season 5,827,883; last week 6,001,496. If you could see the new Chevrolet Six being built, you would understand why it performs so well, lasts so long and brings so much satisfaction and pleasure to its owners.

Visitors to the Chevrolet plants marvel at the care and precision with which the Chevrolet Six is made. They find that the quality of raw materials is held to standards unsurpassed anywhere in the automotive industry. They see many remarkable machines and processes developed by Chevrolet and used by Chevrolet exclusively. They learn that in the manufacture of the engine alone there are hundreds of separate inspections! Pistons are weighed individually, matched in sets to within one-half ounce and then are fitted by hand to three one-thousandths of an inch clearance. Piston pins must be within $1\frac{1}{2}$ tenths of one one-thousandth of their specified size. These pins are first carefully ground, then burnished and finally chrome-plated so that they have a surface as smooth as the finest glass.

The piston pin test—showing one of the many marvelously accurate gauges used to maintain Chevrolet quality

Connecting rods are matched in sets of six to within one-quarter ounce and, after precise machining, are individually fitted by hand to the crankshaft. The special alloy-steel crankshaft is the subject of truly

Chevrolet precision instruments are regularly checked against master gauges which are accurate to one millionth of an inch amazing care and precision in manufacture. All bearings must be lapped and rolled, and are not allowed to taper over their length more than one half of one one-thousandth of an inch. If they are out-of-round over one quarter of one one-thousandth of an inch, the crankshaft is scrapped. After being machined, the crankshaft is checked for dynamic balance in apparatus specially developed for this purpose by the General Motors Research Laboratories. This machine indicates with marvelous accuracy the exact amount and direction of any out-of-balance. Before any crankshaft is accepted it must show a dynamic balance within $\frac{1}{2}$ inch-ounce of perfection.

Chevrolet cars are run millions of miles each year at General Motors' great proving ground

These few examples of Chevrolet manufacturing standards serve to indicate the solid worth built into every part of the car. Many of these operations could be less accurate and less painstakingly carried out—but the Chevrolet owner would not get the long life, the dependability, the smoothness of operation and the remarkable economy that he now enjoys in the Chevrolet Six. Soundly built to serve you long and well! No compromise with quality in manufacture means no compromise with satisfaction in ownership.

MRS. INMAN'S PORTRAIT PRESENTED TO BERRY SCHOOL

Gift From Atlanta Circle To Hang in Mothers' Building

The announcement by Mrs. Joseph T. Orme, vice president of the Martha Berry Circle, of Atlanta, that the circle had commissioned Lewis Gregg, well-known Atlanta artist, to paint the portrait of the circle president, Mrs. Frank Inman, was a feature of the spring meeting of the organization which was held at 11 o'clock yesterday morning at the Piedmont Driving Club. The portrait will hang in the Mothers' building as a gift from the Atlanta circle upon the completion of the handsome building as a unit of the Berry school plant at Rome. In letting the commission for the painting, the circle members paid tribute to Mrs. Inman as their leader and as the guiding spirit and inspiration for the splendid program fostered by the circle in furthering the development of the school.

Mrs. Inman presided over the meeting which carried unusual interest, due to the program and the reports given. Mrs. William H. Kiser read "The Tenth Generation" by Harry Stilwell Edwards, after which the president gave her report. Mrs. Inman spoke briefly of the activities of the school, and particularly of the new Mothers' building which is nearing completion on the campus, and which will fill a long felt need as a dormitory for the college girls. A sum of $30,000 is needed to finish the building, and Mrs. Inman expressed the confidence that the amount would be forthcoming through the efforts of those deeply interested in the progress of the school.

Prominent Visitor.
A prominent visitor present was Mrs. Guy Carpenter, of New York, who gave her impressions of a recent visit to the school. Mrs. Robert Alton reported the results of a recent trip made by Miss Martha Berry to New York, at which time she addressed a large congregation at St. Bartholomew's church.

dentists,

THEMSELVES, AGREE ON THIS

TYPE OF DENTIFRICE

A LEADING research institution made an investigation among 50,000 practicing dentists in order to get their opinion as to the most effective type of dentifrice. Read the following summary of the replies received:

95% of the answers stated that germ acids most frequently cause tooth decay and gum irritation;

95% agreed that the most serious trouble occurs at the place where teeth and gums meet;

85% stated that the best product to prevent these acids from causing decay and irritating the gums is Milk of Magnesia.

Squibb Dental Cream is made with more than 50% Squibb Milk of Magnesia. Isn't this real assurance that its formula is correct—that it will protect your teeth and gums?

There are dozens of different tooth-pastes—with countless conflicting theories. But it is significant that dentists agree on one type of dentifrice.

Try Squibb's. Notice how beautifully it cleans. How it refreshes the mouth! Squibb's contains no grit, no astringent—nothing which might injure.

Mrs. Rambo Speaks to Clubwomen At Council Meeting in Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz., April 28.—Mrs. R. K. Rambo, director for Georgia and representing the State Federation of Women's Clubs at the general federation meeting, which opened for a week's session here Monday, gave a two-minute speech this evening on the director's program, which was broadcast by radio. Her subject was: "Contributing to Life's Enrichment." She said:

"The essentials of a rich life are faith, health, education, happy homes, good citizenship, music and all the fine arts, the conversation of God's beneficent gifts and friendship."

"All these things the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs has promoted from her youth up. From the day of her birth, November 28, 1890, she has been at the forefront in the affairs of her state, sponsoring and working for the passage of all laws tending to the enrichment of the life of the people of her state and nation."

"In February, 1928, the Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore, Md., published a story of tremendous power, written by Mary Stillwell Edwards, of Georgia, called 'The Tenth Generation.' It is a powerful plea for the enrichment of life for all children of generations to come through Christian education. Throughout the south, especially in the mountain regions, where the people of the purest Anglo-Saxon blood in this nation, are schools for the purpose of Christian education, and we are proud to say that Tallulah Falls Industrial School, Inc., owned by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, is the outstanding institution of this kind."

"The General Federation of Women's Clubs and her 45 loyal daughters are contributing in every way to the enrichment of life through unselfish service, and their influence has gone out to the remote places of the earth, enriching the lives of women in many foreign lands, making a close sisterhood of the women of the world, and I believe it will be largely instrumental in bringing about the world peace when it comes."

"Last on my list, but by no means least, is friendship, for nothing contributes more to the enrichment of life for the individual than friendship. It is a magic word and many of us have had our lives enriched and our days made golden by the magic alchemy of friendship formed through personal contact with the splendid women composing this august body. Personally, my life is richer for this privilege."

"I leave with you the words of a precious Georgia woman, spoken on the silver anniversary of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. She said: 'The federation stands in its maturity, the hand-maiden of the state of Georgia and the nation, with the strength to serve, wisdom to understand, conservatism to guide, courage, to reform and always with a great loving heart to extend sympathy and cheer throughout the days of the years of her maturation.'"

No woman should risk unknown substitutes for Kotex

There's health risk in cheaply-made pads of questionable hygienic purity.

THERE'S one time to be cautious—that's when you hear the expression, "just like Kotex." How do you know it's just like Kotex? Who stands back of it? Where was it made? How? By whom? Is it, like Kotex, used by hospitals from coast to coast?

Kotex is safe

Those words, "just like Kotex," mean much more, you see, than surface resemblance. It's easy to make a pad that looks like Kotex. Far, far harder to make one that meets the rigid Kotex standards of purity, of cleanliness, of perfect hygienic safety.

After all, why take chances? You know Kotex is safe. It is treated to deodorize. It is adjustable. Last year more than 10,000, 000 pads were used by hospitals alone—your choice of Kotex should be your guide. Kotex may cost a few pennies more than some questionable substitute, of whose makers you know nothing. But those few cents guarantee a product that meets your personal ideals of cleanliness, as well as hygienic safety.

Perfect comfort

You have every possible comfort in Kotex. Careful shaping, for comfort and inconspicuous lines. Super-softness... that lasts... because Kotex is made of Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding, which absorbs scientifically, away from the surface.

Kotex Company, Chicago.

IN HOSPITALS

1 The Kotex absorbent is the identical material used by surgeons in 85% of the country's leading hospitals.

2 Kotex is soft... Not merely an apparent softness, that soon pads into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.

3 Can be worn on either side with equal comfort. No embarrassment.

4 Disposable, instantly, completely.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE No. 69

Upon the last day of the tourney, the Knights of the Sepulcher were many points ahead of their rivals. And once again, contrary to age-old custom, King Bohun, taking the place of his herald as they paraded before the opening encounter, rode to the stand of the people of Nimrod. Here, before the eyes of Prince Gobred, he drew rein. Again his insolent gaze rested upon the beautiful face of Guinalda, before he addressed her father.
